

Justice for Jeremiah

Outline of the Case of the Suspicious Death of Jeremiah Duggan

On 27 March 2003 the body of British student Jeremiah Duggan was found at the side of a dual carriageway, five and a half kilometres outside the town of Wiesbaden in Germany. Early that morning, Jeremiah had made several telephone calls to his family and girlfriend, telling them that he was in big trouble and that he believed his life was in danger. Then at 6.10 am Jeremiah was allegedly hit and run over by two cars and killed. The German police decided immediately that this was suicide, closing the case without further investigation. The police took no formal witness statements, failed to investigate the full circumstances, failed to release to the family the clothes Jeremiah was wearing, failed to carry out a post mortem, failed to carry out a medical examination of injuries or to take notice of the parents' requests for a full investigation of the case. There was no forensic examination of the cars nor was the alleged traffic death investigated as a crime scene.

Jeremiah was studying at the British Institute in Paris when he bought a newspaper called Nouvelle Solidarite and was told he could go to Germany to attend a Peace conference against the Iraq war. He mistakenly believed he would learn more from eminent politicians and economists and had no notion that this conference was in reality used as recruiting grounds by the LaRouche network and was organized by the Schiller Institute in Wiesbaden, Germany.

The Schiller Institute is a front group for the movement headed by Lyndon LaRouche, which operates a youth cadre on an international scale. Lyndon LaRouche is a convicted criminal who served five years of a fifteen-year prison sentence in the US. The LaRouche organization is documented as a political cult which uses terror tactics, fraud, and subjugation and intimidation of its members and of potential members.

The parents were told by a lecturer of the LaRouche youth movement that Jeremiah did not agree with the views being expressed and that he had made a public statement during the conference saying he was a Jew. Jeremiah spoke out in response to the way that the Jews were being blamed for the Iraq war and all the world's evils. For the last thirty years Lyndon LaRouche, a notorious conspiracy theorist, has published misinformation worldwide inciting hatred against the British and the Jews, with such misinformation frequently being picked up by the Middle East press. On initial view, this misinformation may seem so outrageous that it has often been dismissed as a joke, but underneath the codes, hate figures and falsifications, the incitement to hatred continues. One of the conspiracy myths is that the British Tavistock clinic is a part of the British Intelligence and that it programmes dangerous assassins who are sent worldwide to attack the enemy (including the LaRouche organization) so as to help the British to spread their power throughout the world. The LaRouche organization spreads these anti-Semitic and anti-British conspiracy theories amongst unsuspecting people, and employs a smokescreen of high culture with homage to poetry, music, art and mathematics.

The title of "Schiller Institute" is given to a "cultural institute" headed by Lyndon LaRouche's wife Helga Zepp LaRouche. On the morning of Jeremiah's death, Helga Zepp LaRouche described him, at a meeting in their offices, as a British Jew and a representative of the enemy sent over from Britain by the Tavistock clinic to harm the LaRouche organization. Jeremiah's body was found five minutes from the Executive Intelligence Review (the LaRouche Organization's press agency), but according to the German authorities' documents, he was alleged to have run five and a half kilometres in a short time from a flat in Wiesbaden where he was alleged to have been staying to the place where he was allegedly hit and run over by the two cars.

Wiesbaden is the European headquarters of the LaRouche organization.

Recently LaRouche has concentrated his plans to expand his youth movement in Europe. This means canvassing outside colleges in France and Germany to recruit young people to abandon their studies and become full-time members of the LaRouche organization.

New Evidence; Failure to Investigate.

Recently a forensic pathologist of international repute studied the British post mortem report and the 75 photographs of the scene as to whether or not Jeremiah could have been hit and run over by any cars. He concluded that it was impossible that that could have happened, as there were no signs on his body or the clothes of being run over, and no traces on the vehicles of human hair or tissue or clothing, and also quoting other forensic details.

Other contradictions include: the damage to the cars cannot be reconciled with the kind of damage likely to have been caused by collision with and running over a human body; tracks on the road do not match the cars and braking systems; Paul Canning, expert UK forensic photographer, found no evidence on the cars to show there was contact with a body; and this is backed up by the German traffic accident reconstruction expert who stated that there were no deposits on the cars of blood or cloth. Also, it is confirmed by German authorities that there was no forensic examination of the cars to establish how the damage to the cars occurred. Jeremiah's passport, which was not with his body, but in the hands of the LaRouche organization, was handed over to the German police. Tests show that it was splattered with Jeremiah's blood.

This compelling new evidence raises profound reservations about Jeremiah's death being caused by a traffic crash. Also it raises the question "Did Jeremiah die from head injuries inflicted by severe beating or kicks to the head, or was he hit and run over by cars?" What part did the LaRouche movement play in possibly subjecting him to a sustained mental attack while LaRouche recruiters tried to get him to join up? It is well known how the LaRouche organization uses techniques that employ extreme pressure, conspiracy theories, intimidation and terror tactics.

Professor Dr A Kreuzer (Criminal Law) from the University of Giessen disagrees with the German police view that further investigation was not necessary, as he sees this as entirely inappropriate as there were indeed suspicions, and there was a duty of "Diplomatic Care." He also finds that the legal guidelines do require a post mortem.

For the last four years the Duggan family have taken legal action in Germany, showing how there has been a violation of Articles 2, 3 and 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights, but so far all has failed to bring about a proper investigation, and the case now rests with the German Constitutional Court.

Urgent steps need to be implemented to get an investigation into the full circumstances of the death of Jeremiah and its relation to the LaRouche movement. Any organization that poses a threat to youth, causes suffering either by physical or mental harm or spreads anti-Semitic propaganda and the incitement to hatred deserves serious investigation by German, British and French authorities.
